ABSTRACT:

“Irritable bowel syndrome is one of the most prevalent functional gastrointestinal illnesses, affecting 10–20% of adults globally”.

The homoeopathic totality in this clinical picture was constituted by right-sided abdominal pain of sharp, lightning-like character, markedly aggravated by motion, along with significant alteration in stool frequency. The bowel disturbance was expressed as alternating constipation and diarrhoea, with stools that were mucoid and sticky in nature. On individualization of the characteristic symptoms in accordance with homoeopathic principles, Lycopodium Clavatum was selected as the indicated remedy. On follow-up, there was a marked reduction in the intensity and frequency of abdominal pain, normalization of bowel habits, and eventual resolution of complaints, indicating a curative response.

KEYWORDS: Irritable Bowel Syndrome, Individualized homoeopathic remedy, Lycopodium, Kent Repertory.

INTRODUCTION:

Irritable bowel syndrome (IBS) is a common functional bowel disorder in which abdominal pain is associated with defecation or a change in bowel habit in the absence of structural pathology.¹ Based on predominant symptoms, IBS is classified as diarrhoea-predominant (IBS-D), constipation-predominant (IBS-C), and mixed (IBS-M).

Lifetime prevalence of IBS is 10-15%. It accounts for up to 25-50% of referrals to a gastroenterologist, and is the second most common reason for work absenteeism after the common cold. IBS has a 2:1 female predominance. It is more common in persons younger than 50 years of age. IBS is associated with multiple comorbidities such as somatic pain syndromes (fibromyalgia, chronic fatigue syndrome, chronic pelvic pain) and psychiatric disorders (major depression, anxiety).²

Clinical Picture

Abdominal pain and irregular bowel habits. Additional symptoms often include abdominal distention, relief of abdominal pain with bowel movement, increased frequency of stools with pain, loose stools with pain, mucus in stools, and sense of incomplete evacuation. Associated findings include pasty stools, ribbon or pencil-thin stools, heartburn, bloating, backpain, weakness, faintness, palpitations, urinary frequency.³

Rome IV criteria for the diagnosis of IBS.”

At least 1 day per week of recurrent abdominal pain or discomfort associated with two or more of the following criteria”:

- 1.Related to defecation
- 2.Associated with a change in frequency of stool
- 3.Associated with a change in form (appearance) of stool

Criteria should be met for the previous 3 months.²

Dr. Kent's method of case analysis was employed in view of the presence of well-defined characteristic mental symptoms, physical generals, and particulars, permitting precise individualization.⁴The totality of symptoms and miasmatic evaluation guided the selection of Lycopodium clavatum in centesimal potency. Repertorial analysis using Kent's Repertory with RADAR 10.5 software identified Lycopodium clavatum as the leading remedy, covering the majority of the selected rubrics.⁵ The repertorial outcome was subsequently corroborated through Materna Medica consultation.^{6,7}

A CASE REPORT:

A 42-year-old homemaker presented the following details.

Chief Complaints-

Pain in right side of abdomen on and off since 8 months. Alternate constipation and diarrhoea with mucoid stools.

History of Chief Complaint-

The patient presented with abdominal pain predominantly localized to the right side, described as a sudden, sharp, lightning-like sensation. The pain was markedly aggravated by movement. Bowel habits were notably altered, with irregular stool frequency characterized by alternating episodes of constipation and diarrhoea. The stools were mucoid and sticky in consistency.

Past History-No significant past medical or surgical history was reported.

Family History-Mother suffering from Diabetes Mellitus taking conventional medicines.

Mentals-The patient was emotionally sensitive, crying over minor issues, and displayed a strong dependence on others, being unable to live alone. She exhibited significant anxiety about her health, with persistent fear of diseases. Her thinking was often confused, and she was unable to make decisions independently or distinguish between right and wrong. A pronounced religious inclination was noted, along with low self-confidence.

Physical Generals-

The patient's general physical constitution was evaluated in detail. Dietary habits were mixed, with a good appetite and a pronounced desire for sweets. Thirst was present but limited to small quantities taken at frequent intervals. Bowel movements were irregular, while urinary frequency was noted as 4-5 times during the day and occasionally at night. Sleep was disturbed, primarily due to the abdominal complaints, and dreams were described as of a horrific nature. Perspiration was scanty overall.

General Physical Examination-

Blood Pressure: 130/80 mm of hg

Pulse: 86/min

Respiratory Rate: 18/min

Temperature: Afebrile

Systemic Examination-

Mild tenderness noted in right lower quadrant of abdomen.

Diagnosis-

Diagnosis was based on clinical symptoms and ROME IV diagnostic criteria of IBS.

Result and Discussion-

The present study aimed to evaluate the therapeutic response to individualized constitutional Homoeopathic treatment in a case of Irritable Bowel Syndrome (IBS). A consistent and progressive improvement was observed in the severity, frequency, and periodicity of abdominal pain, and altered bowel habits, indicating restoration of functional balance.

The remedy Lycopodium clavatum was prescribed after systematic case analysis, evaluation, and repertorization. The favourable clinical outcome obtained following the administration of Lycopodium clavatum substantiates the efficacy of individualization supported by repertorial totality. However, further studies with larger sample sizes are required to substantiate and validate these observations.

Conclusion-

In this case presentation, it is evident how Homoeopathic individualised treatment plays a significant role in the management of Irritable Bowel Syndrome (IBS). The prescription was based on the totality of symptoms, giving due importance to mental generals, physical generals, and characteristic particulars, in accordance with the fundamental principles of Homoeopathy. This case highlights the wide scope of Homoeopathy in managing gastrointestinal disorders like IBS.

Evidence based Homoeopathy: Case Report of Alopecia Areata

Summary

Abstract: Alopecia is the term given to absence or loss of hair. The extent of the hair loss varies. The important clinical forms of Alopecia: 1) Alopecia Areata: Bald spots, Patchy Hair loss. 2) Alopecia Totalis: The person loses all of the hair on his or her head. 3) Alopecia universalis: Loss of hair of entire body. The most common form of alopecia areata treatment is the use of corticosteroids, powerful anti-inflammatory drugs that can suppress the immune system. Homoeopathic literature shows that cases of AA have been treated successfully with homoeopathic medicines. Case Summary: A 45-year-old male patient reported loss of hair since 3 months. A complete case history was taken and on the basis of individualization, Fluoric acid was given. There was significant improvement with homoeopathic treatment, with complete disappearance of bald patches without any recurrence. It shows effect of homoeopathic medicine in treatment of Alopecia.
